Dal 24 ottobre, le Forze di difesa israeliane hanno iniziato ad aumentare la pressione militare sulla Siria, espandendo nel contempo le operazioni militari contro Hamas nella Striscia di Gaza e Hezbollah in Libano.

Da allora, gli attacchi aerei israeliani non si sono più limitati a colpire, come hanno fatto impunemente dal 2018, le postazioni militari dell'esercito siriano e della Force Quds, l'unità speciale iraniana delle Guardie della Rivoluzione Islamica rimasta a difendere il presidente Bashar Assad dopo averlo aiutato a sconfiggere l'ISIS (creato dalla CIA statunitense e dal Mossad israeliano, secondo l'Hashid delle Forze di liberazione popolare irachene).

Le IDF hanno anche iniziato a colpire i quartieri civili per esportare quella strategia di terrore e sterminio che ha portato il primo ministro sionista israeliano Benjamin Netanyahu ai genocidi in Palestina e Libano, protetti dalla diplomazia dei paesi della NATO.

Domenica almeno sette civili sono stati uccisi in un attacco aereo israeliano su un edificio residenziale nella capitale siriana Damasco, ha affermato il ministero della Difesa del Paese.

Gli intensi attacchi dell'aviazione sionista non hanno causato un massacro come a Gaza e in Libano solo perché la maggior parte dei missili, lanciati dalla zona aerea libanese, vengono normalmente intercettati dai sistemi antimissile russi S-400 e S-300.

L'attacco può essere visto anche come una funzione di ricatto nei confronti della Russia, che garantisce protezione al Paese e potrebbe in qualsiasi momento decidere di rispondere al fuoco contro l'ex alleato israeliano.

La diplomazia di Netanyahu al lavoro per dare a Trump la pace in Libano

On Saturday evening, the prime minister's closest minister, Ron Dermer, flew to the United States, where he is expected to meet with President-elect Donald Trump and advisers, in the first meeting of a senior Jerusalem official with members of the new administration.

Although Israel's new foreign minister is Gideon Sa'ar, who succeeded Israel Katz, Dermer is effectively acting as head of diplomacy.

On the table in Washington, commentators say, will be the wars in Gaza and Lebanon, tensions between Israel and Iran, and one of the issues closest to the US's heart: the expansion of the Abraham Accords to promote normalization between Israel and Arab countries.

In fact, American Lebanese Muslims openly supported Donald Trump's election campaign, in response to Joseph Biden's authorization to invade Lebanon by land, and now they expect their debt to be repaid.

There have been at least three long phone calls between the new, yet-to-be-appointed American president and Israeli Prime Minister Bibi.

In order to end the conflict on the northern front without military consequences, in fact, Dermer was secretly in Moscow to represent Israel's efforts to stop the fighting.

Russia is in fact an important player in Syria, where several fringes of Hezbollah reside and receive weapons from Iran.

But the latest massacre in Damascus has infuriated the Iranian authorities who have always supported Assad's government: Syria, in fact, is led by the Ba'th party of socialist origin and Alawite Islamic confession, a branch of the Shiite one that supports the theocracy of Tehran.
